Stern, Isaac, with Chaim Potok, My First Seventy Nine Years (New York, 1999: Knopf)

At 289: 'Isaiah Berlin was an idol of mine and probably the finest mind I have ever encountered. We shared many moments of happy conversation, discussing everything from music to poitics to people, to gossip at his home, on the telephone, or in letters. We met in London, in Oxford, in Jerusalem, in New York, wherever it was possible to be together at the same time. I loved him deeply and I miss him.'
